An unintentional dural puncture or perhaps even an uncomplicated spinal anesthetic could produce a pressure gradient of the CSF between the brain and the spinal cord with resulting cerebral hernia. . General anesthesia with laryngoscopy and tracheal intubation also For practical reasons, most of the literature on the anaesthetic management of women in labour with ACM-I consists of case reports and series of smaller cases, 13Landau R. Delrue V. Intraoperative anesthetic objectives for patients undergoing Chiari decompression will be presented and postoperative objectives will be discussed in detail. One case (3%) of aspiration pneumonia with general anesthesia was reported.The findings suggest that anesthetic complications occur infrequently in patients with ACM-I regardless of anesthetic management. 2005; 22: 67-70See article Scopus (32) PubMed Crossref Google ScholarNeuroaxial anesthesia in women in labour with intracranial pathology: a comprehensive review and re-evaluation of risk.Anesthesiology. Preoperative considerations will be examined, as well as ways to optimize these patients before surgery. The dates of implantation of the electronic clinical histories were different in the institutions, so the study period was from 1 January 2007 to 1 June 2017 in three centers, and from 1 March 2004 to 1 June 2017 in one center.The inclusion criterion was any pregnant woman diagnosed with ACM-I who gave birth at the centers during the study period. It should be noted that 20% of patients were unaware that they had MCA-I before delivery, demonstrating that mild hernia can be and it's often an incidental find. The incidence of unintentional punctura n dural was similar to rates reported for deliveries without MCA-I, but the relative risk of PDPH may be higher in patients with syringomyelia. 2012; 3: 26 See in ArtAculo Scopus (24) PubMed Crossref Google ScholarAnesthetic and obstA management of syringomyelia during labor and delivery: case series and review Anesth Analg. In a hospital, most patients with CA-I are encouraged to undergo a neurosurgical consultation during pregnancy, and most of these women had a cesar birth under general anesthesia. Indications for cesarean delivery are shown in Table 3. Three of these epidural catheters were converted to general anesthesia for cesarean delivery, bringing the total number of general anesthetics to 34 (18%). In addition, a case (3%) of pneumoniaA by aspiration associated with general anesthesia notificA n. Signs and symptoms arising from Chiari malformations, including syringomyelia, respiratory dysfunction n and vasomotor instability, are discussed.
